Outbreaks training course

Outbreaks training course

Our Outbreaks event is an intimate, in-person training course designed to foster meaningful interaction, with attendance limited to a maximum of 16 delegates. The course is held at the Healthcare Infection Society headquarters, conveniently located near King's Cross St Pancras in London.

The Outbreaks training course has been created and developed by Dr Tim Boswell (Medical microbiology consultant and Deputy Director of Infection Prevention and Control - Nottingham University Hospital).

The course is aimed principally towards combined infection trainees, medical microbiology, virology and infectious diseases trainees, clinical scientists registered on a HSST programme and senior infection control nurses.
